DETAILED ACTION

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 1-23 are allowed. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: Among other features, these claims recite integrated circuits that are irremovably bonded to the sensing device such that the sensing device and the integrated circuit form a single physical unit. The sensing device receives biometric information. Thus, sensing device senses the biometric information from the person, rather than merely accepts inputs from another device. The claims recite the biometric information stored in the memory and this biometric information being used for security. The claims recite memory rather than merely any storage device. The prior art did not teach or suggest the particular features in the context of other limitations of the claims
